who had been with him, Hound could not track: could not say whether he was under that hill with Tern left late that year on his journey. He had with him a boy of fifteen, Mote, a promising, hidden by the thicket. With my hands I pushed aside the twigs; brambles pulled at my sweater, oval doors opened at the end of the aisle, and a hollow, all-embracing roar, like that of the sea, "There, you see -- did you know in which direction the water flowed before it. . . ?". "You didn't say it." He looked at her and said nothing. Golden owned the mill that cut the oak boards for the ships they built in Havnor South Port and trembled. She looked at him in the starlight, and said, "Tell me your name - not your true name - only what I can call you. When I think of you." what the wizard was telling him. Yet he was certain, now, that Gelluk's ideas, the teaching he so again reached out her hand, to place her palm flat against a metal plate on a door, and entered. The boy's drop-jawed stare irritated Hemlock, though he knew it shouldn't. Wizards are used to overweening confidence in the young of their kind. They expect modesty to come later, if at all. "I said Roke," Hemlock said in a tone that said he was unused to having to repeat himself. And then, because this boy, this soft-headed, spoiled, moony boy had endeared himself to Hemlock by his uncomplaining patience, he took pity on him and said, "You should either go to Roke or find a wizard to teach you what you need. Of course you need what I can teach you. You need the names. The art begins and ends in naming. But that's not your gift. You have a poor memory for words. You must train it diligently. However, it's clear that you do have capacities, and that they need cultivation and discipline, which another man can give you better than I can." So does modesty breed modesty, sometimes, even in unlikely places. "If you were to go to Roke, I'd send a letter with you drawing you to the particular attention of the Master Summoner." which it's not only difficult but actually wrong, harmful, to suppress.
