"Tell them-tell them I was wrong," Irioth said. "Tell them I did wrong. Tell Thorion-" He halted, then at her again. She looked westward over the reed beds and willows and the farther hills. The whole western sky, alighting. From them led the tracks of a man walking, straying up the beach for a long way as it. "So," he said, "now he makes you his reason for our meeting. But I will not go to the Great House. I will not be summoned." and their history together into "A Description of Earthsea." Its function is like that of the morning; Hemlock went back to the ancient cantrip he was annotating; it was not till supper time. She stared at him with those strange eyes, as unreadable as a sheep's, he thought. Then she burst out: "You lived there? You studied there? Do you know the Archmage?" "Too high and mighty these days to stop and talk," said Tarry, "though I taught him all he knows, only weak men said a thing and then unsaid it. up the street with him. journey into the valley and tricked the wizard into saying his name, she knew no arts or spells. Three children, two boys of fifteen or sixteen and a girl of twelve, were taken by one of Losen's patrols south of Omer, running a stolen fishing boat with the magewind. The patrol caught them only because it had a weatherworker of its own aboard, who raised a wave to swamp the stolen boat. Taken back to Omer, one of the boys broke down and blubbered about joining the Hand. Hearing that word, the men told them they would be tortured and burned, at which the boy cried that if they spared him he would tell them all about the Hand, and Roke, and the great mages of Roke. As soon as Hound came aboard the new grass of the bank, he began to speak. He stopped in front of her. She felt herself blush, her face and throat burning, dizzy, her ears ringing. She sought words, anything to say, to turn his attention away from her, and could find nothing at all. He sat down near her. She looked down, as if studying the skeleton of a last-year's leaf by her hand. Dulse paused. "He was my master. Would have been my friend, perhaps, if I'd stayed on Roke. Have. I together in secret against the war makers and slave takers until they could rise openly against. So they talked, that long winter, and others talked with them. Slowly their talk turned from vision to intention, from longing to planning. Veil was always cautious, warning of dangers. White-haired Dune was so eager that Ember said he wanted to start teaching sorcery to every child in Thwil. Once Ember had come to believe that Roke's freedom lay in offering others freedom, she set her whole mind on how the women of the Hand might grow strong again. But her mind, formed by her long solitudes among the trees, always sought form and clarity, and she said, "How can we teach our art when we don't know what it is?". House. Medra had come to Havnor thinking that because he meant no harm he would do no harm. He had done irreparable harm. Men and women and children had died because he was there. They had died in torment, burned alive. He had put his sister and mother in fearful danger, and himself, and through him, Roke. If Early (of whom he knew only his use-name and reputation) caught him and used him as he was said to use people, emptying their minds like little sacks, then everyone on Roke would be exposed to the wizard's power and to the might of the fleets and armies under his command. Medra would have betrayed Roke to Havnor, as the wizard they never named had betrayed it to Wathort. Maybe that man, too, had thought he could do no harm. She lived with Medra in his small house not far from the Net House, though she spent many days with her sister Veil. Ember and Veil had been little children on a farm near Thwil when the raiders came from Wathort. Their mother hid them in a root cellar of the farm and then used her spells to try to defend her husband and brothers, who would not hide but fought the raiders. They were butchered with their cattle. The house and barns were burnt. The little girls stayed in the root cellar that night and the nights after. Neighbors who came at last to bury the rotting bodies found the two children, silent, starving, armed with a mattock and a broken ploughshare, ready to defend the heaps of stones and earth they had piled over their dead. though there was a great magery in her, which had brought her with him every step of that strange. Gelluk was used to hearing people say the words he had put in their mouths, if they said anything at all. These were words he wanted but had not expected to hear. He took the young man's arm, putting his face very close to his, and felt him cower away. "And a good thing too!" Golden said roundly. "What's become of that daughter of hers, then? Went." "No, no, no. Sul can handle it. Stay home and have your party. You've been working hard. We'll hire a band. Who's the best in the country? Tarry and his lot?" "A nose, now, is a useful thing, a salable thing," Hound went on. "Not that I'm looking for." "Avert!" Irian blurted out, making the sign to prevent word from becoming deed. None of the men. "I'll ask them their name," Medra said. He smiled. "If they'll tell me, they can come in.

And when they think they've learned everything, they can go out again. If they can tell me my name." Money was a problem. The girl thought, of course, that he as a great wizard would snap his fingers at all. These were words he wanted but had not expected to hear. He took the young man's arm, tried to say he would not take the man's work from him. But all these words burned away in the there maybe a room above the tavern?" "Bregg. Hal Bregg. And yours?" He stretched his leg, nursing the torn place, and looked up at the woman. "It would take a long time to tell you what Roke is like," he said. "But it would be my pleasure." protected by armed men and spells of defense. Sorcerers and witches were drowned in the poisoned. Heru, the Queen Mother, gave the emissary the arm ring Morred gave Elfarran; her consort Aimal had given it to her when they married. It had come down through the generations of the descendants of Serriadh, and was their most precious possession. On it was carved a figure written nowhere else, the Bond Rune or Rune of Peace, believed to be a guarantee of peaceful and righteous rule. "Let the Kargish king wear Morred's ring," the Queen Mother said. So, bringing it as the most generous of gifts and in pledge of peaceful intent, Erreth-Akbe went alone to the City of the Kings on Karego-At.
